

the 1990s, the number of people who have been employed in the public sector has increased in all countries. The increase in public sector employment has been particularly rapid in the United Kingdom, where the public sector has grown from 10.5% of the total workforce in 1980 to 17.5% in 1997 (see Figure 1).

There are a number of reasons for the increase in public sector employment. One reason is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. In many countries, the public sector has become a major employer, particularly in the service sector. Another reason is that the public sector has become a more attractive place to work. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the public sector is often seen as a more secure and stable place to work, and that it often offers better benefits and conditions of work than the private sector.

There are a number of implications of the increase in public sector employment. One implication is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. This means that the public sector is now a more important part of the overall economic picture, and that it is now a more important part of the overall economic picture. Another implication is that the public sector has become a more attractive place to work. This means that the public sector is now a more attractive place to work, and that it is now a more attractive place to work.

There are a number of reasons for the increase in public sector employment. One reason is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. In many countries, the public sector has become a major employer, particularly in the service sector. Another reason is that the public sector has become a more attractive place to work. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the public sector is often seen as a more secure and stable place to work, and that it often offers better benefits and conditions of work than the private sector.

There are a number of implications of the increase in public sector employment. One implication is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. This means that the public sector is now a more important part of the overall economic picture, and that it is now a more important part of the overall economic picture. Another implication is that the public sector has become a more attractive place to work. This means that the public sector is now a more attractive place to work, and that it is now a more attractive place to work.

There are a number of reasons for the increase in public sector employment. One reason is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. In many countries, the public sector has become a major employer, particularly in the service sector. Another reason is that the public sector has become a more attractive place to work. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the public sector is often seen as a more secure and stable place to work, and that it often offers better benefits and conditions of work than the private sector.

There are a number of implications of the increase in public sector employment. One implication is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. This means that the public sector is now a more important part of the overall economic picture, and that it is now a more important part of the overall economic picture. Another implication is that the public sector has become a more attractive place to work. This means that the public sector is now a more attractive place to work, and that it is now a more attractive place to work.

There are a number of reasons for the increase in public sector employment. One reason is that the public sector has become a more important part of the economy. In many countries, the public sector has become a major employer, particularly in the service sector. Another reason is that the public sector has become a more attractive place to work. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the public sector is often seen as a more secure and stable place to work, and that it often offers better benefits and conditions of work than the private sector.